The new Noda administration of the central government and the Tokyo Governor Ishihara forced to changed the course of the march to circumvent the most popular area around the Shinjuku Station on the eve of the demonstration and deployed huge riot police forces beforehand.

The police arrested 12 demonstrators including one French man in white “protective clothing” who protested against obstruction of a far right chauvinist group, Zaitokukai.

Five people are still in detention.

Not a single official of TEPCO was arrested in spite of the flagrant breach of safety regulations and statutes. But the Japanese government makes arrest protesters who only spoke out.

Please forward this email as widely as possible, send protest message to the Japanese government’s email form below and organize anti-nuke struggle all around the world.
